THE LUNG TROUBLE

Not so Serious as was Feared Sunday Night.

THE PRESIDENT PASSES A COMFORTABLE DAY.

He Converses Cheerfully with Members of the Cabinet—Temperature Down to Normal—All the Attendants make Favorable Reports, Etc., Etc., Etc.

[illegible] 8 A. M.—Sept. 12 [illegible] passed an unusually good night [illegible] interrupted [illegible] Suppuration [illegible] gland has [illegible] which has discharged as rapidly [illegible] Temperature [illegible]

D. HAYES AGNEW,
D. W. BLISS.

Eyes Bright and Voice Clear.

Postmaster General James says the president this morning and says he [illegible] generally much better than he dared to expect. A brief conversation [illegible] when the president firmly grasped James' hand and spoke in a very clear voice. His eyes [illegible] are especially bright and natural looking. The postmaster general was so impressed with the president that he thinks he will yet be able to go to the White mountains. He has gone to New York this morning on business. As the day passes the president improves and surgeons feel more encouraged and express the opinion that the lung complication is under control. At 3 o'clock Dr. Bliss says the president's pulse was 106, temperature 99.2, respiration 20, and that he is having a bright day.

Mind also Clear.

When Gen. James called this morning he took the president's hand with "good morning, Mr. President." The president returned the salutation and asked James to be seated and insisted upon it, when a lively conversation ensued. The president asked how the postoffice department was doing. James said "splendidly." They had assumed a civil service basis but there had been no removals or appointments of any note since the president had been sick. The president smiled and asked how the star route investigation was progressing. James said, satisfactorily. The president asked how much have you saved in your department so far? James replied, about a million and a half. After a little longer talk James left.

Swaim and Rockwell report Marked Improvement.

Gen. Swaim said a short time before noon that the president slept from 10 to 12 o'clock last night. He then awoke and took nourishment and immediately fell asleep and did not awake till 4 A. M. At this hour he was sponged off and in the course of a few minutes fell asleep again and did not awake until 7 o'clock, at which time he was apparently refreshed and rested. Col. Rockwell says the president's sleep last night was the best he had had since he was shot. He considers the president stronger. His cough is better to-day and he expectorates freely and without much effort. The Col. compares the expectoration with a bad cold to-day. It is very similar to a cold that has become loose and is passing off. "It should be borne in mind," said Col. Rockwell, "that when improvement in the president's case occurs it is not a great improvement but rather a slight gain. His better days are only a slight improvement over his more favorable days and oftentimes I take his general condition as my guide and can plainly see the aggregate improvement, while it would be almost impossible to indicate which point has materially changed. There has been a great improvement since last night."

Apprehension Allayed.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 12.—The morning bulletin had the effect of allaying somewhat the apprehensions of last night, but whether the lung trouble will pass away or develop into an abscess cannot yet be predicted.

Only a Local Lobular Inflammation.

ELBERON, Sept. 12.—Dr. Bliss said the president was better, had a good appetite, eats freely, and had some milk punch with brandy. The lung affection is nearly or quite under control. It was a local lobular inflammation, which would pass away without serious result. Everything looks favorable again. James and Windom went to New York this morning. The cabinet now consider it safe to go to the White Mountains to-morrow. They will return Friday. Hunt called to-day, and was very favorably impressed with the president's condition. Boynton says it is one of the president's bright days. Doubtless there is an abscess on the right lung, but not aggravated. He thinks the president can throw it off. It is not worse than when he left Washington. It is caused by chronic blood poisoning.

Evening Bulletin.

5 P. M.—(Official.)—The president experienced since the issue of the morning bulletin further amelioration of the symptoms. He has been able to take ample food without discomfort, and has had several refreshing naps. At the noon examination the temperature was 99.2, pulse 106, respiration 20. At 5:30 P. M. the temperature was 99.4, pulse 102, respiration 18.

AGNEW.

More Encouraging.

MacVeagh is much encouraged and says the surgeons are confident that the alarming features of the lung trouble are passing away. Everything looks more encouraging and we feel much relieved.

BLISS.

Blaine to Lowell.

The president slept well last night and his condition to-day is more comfortable and more favorable. During my absence for some time Dr. Agnew and Dr. Hamilton will send you daily reports.

Dr. Pancoast's Views Sunday Night.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The Herald's Long Branch has the following: Dr. Pancoast, the eminent Philadelphia surgeon, who it was reported yesterday was to be asked to join the surgical staff, is stopping at the West End hotel. He denied that he was to be called into the case as consulting physician. He had at least no information of such purpose.

"Doctor," I asked him to-night, "what do you think of the new complication?"

Pancoast was very prompt and decided in his reply. "It is a very serious thing. I have feared some such development for some time."

"Is it the nature of a metastatic abscess?"

"Clearly," he said.

"And it has jumped from the cheek to the lung?" I asked.

"Yes, that is it. The cause is the same as a pyemic state of the blood. That has been evident to my mind for some time."

"Is this necessarily a fatal symptom?"

"No, not necessarily. It can be tapped and run off just as in the case of the parotid gland, but, of course it adds some serious complications."

"Removal does not seem, then, to have succeeded in removing poison from the blood?" I said.

"Not noticeably, at least."

He replied, "that was, of course, the object. Motion was dangerous in some respects, but they felt justified in taking the risk. The case had become too chronic to make lockjaw a very likely complication."

Doctor, what will be the possible course of development in this new trouble, I asked.

The lung affected will, of course, be disturbed and the other lung will suffer more or less out of sympathy. Respiration will be more difficult. You see it is affected already. Then the pain of the swelling, the fever and the operation of tapping will be exhausting and very dangerous to a man in his condition.

"Will the abscess develop much by to-morrow?"

"They sometimes develop very rapidly. Probably in a day or two it will assume marked proportions and characteristics." "In brief, then, you regard the complication as very serious."

"Unquestionably the situation is critical."

The Trouble with the Lungs—Not Improving Nor yet Relapsed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The Tribune's Long Branch special says the decrease of the president's favorable symptoms is not yet sufficient to be dignified by the name of a relapse, nor does it apparently cause serious apprehensions of the president's physicians. There is simply the feature of his case which tonight points in an unfavorable direction and adds one to the number of organs which must be more closely watched. It may result seriously, but there is more reason to believe that it will pass away than to fear more serious developments. For several days the respiratory organs of the president have shown symptoms of irritation, but owing to the fact that the aperture from the parotid swelling into the throat has been in existence through which pus was forced in small quantities, it could not be determined by any examination of matter raised by coughing, whether the difficulty existed in the lower respiratory organs or the throat. It has been determined to-day that although it comes into the throat from the healing gland, it also comes from the lungs. The respiratory murmur in the lungs is full and clear except from a small area in the lower right lobe just above the liver. Hitherto there has been a doubt whether the dullness in this area was caused from the liver or from some affection of the lung itself. To-day it is known that it is due to affection of the lung. It may be an abscess, in which case, although not necessarily fatal, it might be a serious and dangerous development or it may be merely local irritation in the lobe of the lung. The coughing and hawking of the patient have been a source of considerable annoyance to him, and this helped to raise his pulse and to break his rest last night.

This trouble with the lungs is not a new development, it having been in existence probably for some days; but it has never been certainly known before that the symptoms to which it has given rise might not have been the result of the other and known affections. This, therefore, is not held to be the origin of the rise in temperature of to-day above that of yesterday, that being a temporary and expected fluctuation of the fever which prevailed to some extent during the day. The increase in [illegible] is perhaps due in a greater degree to affection of the lungs. The sloughing of the parotid swelling mentioned in the evening bulletins yesterday [illegible] the eating away of the dead tissue [illegible] It is not an unfavorable symptom in any sense but is rather a relief, since the [illegible] a source of irritation. It was taken [illegible] and the operation was [illegible] core of a ripened boil. The [illegible] size about equal to a [illegible]

How Unofficial Reports are Circulated.

[illegible] Sept. 12 [illegible] from a Long Branch [illegible] truth about the president's case [illegible] a statement which the progress [illegible] verified. He declared [illegible] others admitted [illegible] last night [illegible] is not doing well and I believe there [illegible] doubt that the lungs are affected. He [illegible] urged to eat yesterday [illegible] make him four meals. [illegible] abscess had formed in the lungs [illegible] he feared [illegible] Bliss, even admitted [illegible] month ago. The [illegible] give no information [illegible] unless the patient's [illegible] demanded it. For this reason [illegible]

[illegible]

Everything Encouraging.

All Reports Favorable.

To-day has been [illegible] to the attending surgeons and the president's [illegible] Much [illegible] praise and comment is caused by the evident [illegible] of the patient, but the surgeons insist that this is to be expected if the weather affects him in any degree. This has certainly been a good day, as the air has been pure and comparatively dry. According to the statements of the attending surgeons the pulse fell from 110 at noon to 106 at the evening dressing, and the temperature from 99.2 at noon to 98 in the evening, showing there was comparatively no fever at 6 this evening. The cabinet early received assurance that there was no immediate danger, and that the threatened relapse had apparently passed away. Bliss said that this was one of the good days, that the president was decidedly better and that he had expressed himself as feeling improved on several occasions. The doctor was very positive in the statement to-night that all fears of the formation of a pus cavity in the right lung have passed away and that he has reason to believe that the cause of the dullness in the lower portion of the organ is under control. "At least," he said, "it is no worse and I think it better to-night." If there was a formation of an abscess the doctor maintained it would necessarily cause the temperature to rise, whereas it had fallen. The Dr said that Dr. Agnew is perfectly in accord with him with entertaining that opinion. When asked to what he attributed the symptoms manifested by the lung in daily soundings, the doctor took the same ground as he did last night, holding that it was caused by the wound or track of the bullet, that it was limited to lobular inflammation, and it would be overcome by the president's vitality. He was very emphatic in his remarks to-night that there were no indications of abscess. He believed now that the lung affection had not assumed any greater proportions since he came here. It had been noticed more than three weeks ago.

Referring to the glandular complications the doctor said that it is practically well. There is still a very small opening in the last incision, but it is getting along very satisfactorily and the swelling has entirely subsided. His cough is improved. The doctor says the patient now expectorates without being annoyed with the hacking he recently experienced. He has coughed but very little during the day and each time raised a considerable quantity of mucus. He attributes the whole trouble, in this connection, to a section of mucus from parotid, which gradually worked down the throat, causing inflammation and resulting in a desire on the part of the patient to throw it off which was being successfully accomplished.

The doctor was asked a number of questions about the ball, and explained that there was some doubt in his mind up to this morning whether or not the track of the ball was thoroughly healed, but this morning I became satisfied, upon inserting a new and much smaller catheter, that the ball had become thoroughly encysted, and that granulation had been the means of closing the wound from the ball to within nine inches of the surface. About three and a half inches has healed.

The catheter came in contact with an apparently solid substance when it had penetrated nine inches, and I became satisfied after investigation that it had healed solidly, and that it was not artificial matter which was stopping the catheter. He was still giving the patient milk punch every 3 or 4 hours, into which he put three tablespoons of pure brandy. Quinine also had been administered through the rectum in decreased quantities. The Dr. does not think the febrile rise to-night, if it appears at all, will be severe.

Still Favorable.

Agnew says this evening's bulletin was a favorable one and he could not say more than was contained in it if he should talk an hour. Dr. Boynton adheres to the opinion that the lung complication is the result of blood poison [illegible] yet he contends that the president's vitality is sufficiently strong to overcome any serious result from it, providing no further complications of similar character occur. Swaim and Rockwell are encouraged by favorable indications and say the day has undoubtedly been good. Rockwell refers to President Garfield as an extremely intelligent patient and says he places more confidence in his action when comparing his condition from day to day than on the opinions of others. The president is a man not afraid of death and has no more idea of dying than any of us who are enjoying good health.

He considers furthermore, should he be near death's door and in full possession of his faculties, that his great intelligence would enable him to comprehend the fact, and he would not hesitate to give notice to those around him. Hamilton arrived to-night. Agnew will leave in the morning. At 10:30 to-night the president is sleeping, and in the opinion of Hamilton and Agnew has every prospect for a favorable night. There has been no febrile rise. The temperature and respiration are normal. The pulse has not been taken during the day. He has taken nourishment freely and there has been no further annoyance from the stomach. When Hunt called on the president to-day he informed him that there was no business in his department requiring the president's attention. It has been the custom of the president to refer to the secretary in nautical terms, and after shaking the hand of the president, the secretary pointing towards the ocean remarked "Well, Mr. President, you have had to retreat to my domain." "Yes," said the president, "there it is, and isn't it beautiful."

The president to-day expressed the wish that he would soon be able to sit in a rocking chair and look out on the ocean. The day, on the whole, is said to be a favorable one. The trouble in the parotid has practically disappeared. The wound is in excellent condition. The president expresses himself as feeling better.

Cablegram to Lowell.

Attorney General MacVeagh telegraphed as follows to Minister Lowell:

10 P. M.—In the absence of Blaine the attending physicians have requested me to inform you of the president's condition. He has during the day eaten sufficient food with relish and enjoyed at intervals refreshing sleep. His wound and the incisions made by the surgeons look better. The parotid gland has ceased suppuration and may be considered substantially well. He has exhibited more than usual cheerfulness of spirits. The temperature and respiration are now normal and the pulse less frequent and firmer than at the same hour last evening. Notwithstanding these favorable symptoms the lower part of the right lung will continue to be a source of anxiety for some days to come.

EUGENE CITY NOTES.

EUGENE, Sept. 12, 1881.

Word reaches Eugene that Bell Jennings, Esq., of this place, is lying sick at Creswell.

S. B. Eakin, Jr., and wife leave us in a few days for a protracted visit to the eastern states.

Many of our citizens are contemplating a visit to Portland during the time of the mechanics' fair.

Mr. Clay Hill and C. M. Woody of this place left a few weeks ago to attend a theological institute in the east, to prepare for the ministry. Both are graduates of the university and very exemplary young men.

Mr. Jas. Page, very recently of Cleveland, Ohio, has concluded to settle in Eugene, having bought an interest in the grocery store of A. Lynch, Esq. Mr. Page expresses himself well pleased with the country so far as he has seen it.

Mr. Chas. Baker, the accommodating and enterprising proprietor of the St. Charles hotel of this place has lately purchased the fixtures, etc., belonging to Mr. Frank's restaurant and have leased the building for a term of years.

Much complaint is made owing to another change being made in school books, necessitating great expense with apparently but little benefit to be derived therefrom. For several years past school children, after getting through a third of their books, have been compelled to throw them away and buy new books.

As the university begins on Wednesday next a large number of students arrived from north and south on Saturday's train. Everything is in readiness, and the institution will undoubtedly have a prosperous and successful year. The generosity of Mr. Villard has removed every cloud that hung around and clouded the prospects of the university, [illegible] future before them.

The action of the M. E. Conference in appointing Rev. [illegible] to the pastorate of the M. E. church at this place has given much satisfaction to the members and friends of the church. Mr. [illegible] over the past two years while in charge of the church has been a very able and zealous exponent for the cause of christianity, and besides [illegible] business has collected money enough and raised a mortgage of [illegible] with much back interest, that stood against the church property, entirely freeing the church from debt, with the exception of about $[illegible]. This church is at present in a very flourishing condition and has a bright prospect for a long [illegible] year.

Wheat harvesting is drawing to a close, and the [illegible] yield of excellent quality. Farmers are now [illegible] for storage. [illegible]

King Kalakaua's Movements—Emigration to the Islands.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—A Tribune reporter interviewed [illegible] Kalakaua [illegible] who [illegible] said that the king will soon arrive here. He will stay two weeks in the eastern states [illegible] Washington, Kentucky and San Francisco [illegible] he will sail for his kingdom. The king was much surprised at the grandeur, power and wealth of this land, but he was most pleased over the great display that was made over him in Japan.

The Tribune editorially referring to the Armstrong interview says it appears that the current rumor of a design to flood the kingdom of Hawaii with cheap Chinamen is officially denied. It is announced that there are more Chinamen in Hawaii than are wanted there, which seems to be true of most countries, including China. The Hindoo laboring classes are considered superior even to the Chinese. The people finding the most favor in the eyes of Kalakaua and his advisers seem to have been the emigrating class among the Portuguese.

A Leadville Thief Arrested.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—John F. Bateman, aged 26 years, a clerk in the employ of Taylor & Bruton, bankers and bullion merchants in Leadville, robbed his employers of silver bullion to the amount of $[illegible] in the beginning of this month and fled to this city. He carried the bullion valued at $[illegible], and his wife had preceded him with $[illegible] worth. The Leadville banks engaged Inspector Byrnes at once, and he ascertained that a lady giving herself Mrs. Bateman, of Clifton, Staten Island, had silver to the amount of $[illegible] at the assay office to be assayed and stamped. The officers traced the property, found Mrs. Bateman's house in Clifton, watched it and last night arrested Bateman himself. His wife was not found.

The Robbers.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 12.—No more robbers have been captured. The officers were aided much by young Chapman, who is now certainly known to have made a full confession. More arrests are expected to-day. It is rumored that a large quantity of [illegible] taken from the passengers was found in a cave [illegible] miles from the scene of the robbery in an unfrequented part of the country. A special says that a suspicious looking man, heavily armed stranger, riding a fine but over-heated horse was arrested in Nevada, Vernon county. He is evidently one of the robbers.

An Appeal to Americans.

PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 11.—To the American People—We have learned of [illegible] the burnt districts of Huron and Sanilac counties. We have seen the burned, disfigured and writhing bodies of men, women and children, the rough board coffins containing the [illegible] followed to the grave by a few blinded, despairing relatives, [illegible] people throughout the state [illegible] families and neighbors. We learned [illegible] hundred [illegible] already [illegible] bloated bodies are daily discovered; already more than fifteen hundred families are [illegible] utterly destitute and homeless. They are [illegible] homes, crops, horses, [illegible] houseless, [illegible] around the ruins of their habitations [illegible] their dead [illegible] wringing their hands and refusing to be comforted. More than ten thousand people, who only one week ago [illegible] comfortable homes, are [illegible] homeless and helpless sufferers. They are hungry and almost naked when found and in such great numbers and so widely scattered that our best efforts and greatest resources fail to supply their immediate wants. Without speedy and timely aid [illegible] perish and many more will suffer [illegible] our people will do their utmost [illegible] we appeal to the charity and generosity of the American people. Steamer Foundered.

FRANKFORT (Mich.), Sept. 12.—The steamer Columbia of the Northwestern line foundered off Frankfort last night about 11 o'clock and fifteen persons were drowned. Among the number missing are Capt. Malcomb, second mate, Robert Malcomb, first engineer, Wm. Crosby, second engineer, Wm. Miffin, fireman, Geo. Benton, Wm. Shannon, Harriet Simmons, Miss Fitzgerald and a passenger said to be from Chicago, and several others. The bodies of the captain, first and second engineers, Miss Fitzgerald and a young man unknown have come ashore. The steamer was bound from Chicago to Collingwood, Canada, laden with grain. She shifted her cargo in about fifteen minutes and sank within fifteen minutes after. The passengers and crew got away from the steamer on boats, but the boat containing the captain and engineers was capsized.

Daring Robbery.

SEDALIA, MO., Sept 11.—A report is received here that two heavily armed and masked men entered the little town of Bates City, on the Chicago & Alton R. R., about seven miles of Blue Cut, the scene of the train robbery, and drawing pistols and firing, began an indiscriminate pillage of the place. The people offered no resistance and the robbers seem to have taken what they wanted. The amount of booty obtained is not stated.

Particulars of the Shooting at Guiteau.

Actions of the Attempt on Guiteau.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—There is reason to believe that a few days ago there was some talk among the soldiers detailed to guard Guiteau as to [illegible] which [illegible] should be chosen to shoot at him when he should present his head at the window of his cell where it could be seen from the outside. It was decided that the work should be done by Sergeant John A. Mason, of Co. B. 2d artillery, and he made preparation for it this evening. Three wagon loads of soldiers left the arsenal for the jail to relieve the day guards. Mason was in the first wagon, and his companions noticed that he was taciturn, with the look of his [illegible] and was acting strangely. Nothing was said to him about it however. When the wagon reached the jail where Mason was to get out he pushed forward, reached a small hillock about three feet from where the horses stopped, brought his gun to his shoulder, took steady aim at Guiteau's window, shouted "There he is," and fired. Before the smoke cleared away other soldiers gathered around him. "In heaven's name, Mason," cried private Davis, "why did you shoot?" "I wanted to kill that wretch in there," was his reply.

Mason's offense frowned upon.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—No complaint against Sergt. Mason's offense has yet reached the war department. It is stated there that Mason will be promptly surrendered if a demand is made for him by the civil authorities. If such complaint is [illegible] will be arrested. If such demand is not made Mason will be tried by court martial. Army officers generally express a feeling of mortification at the attempt on Guiteau's life as reflecting on the discipline and good name of the service.

Mason to be Tried by Civil Authorities.

Jonathan G. Bigelow, Sergeant Mason's lawyer, called upon the district attorney this afternoon and asked him to claim the prisoner from the military authorities to be tried in civil court. [illegible] declined to do this at present and the lawyer expressed the intention to swear out a warrant himself for Mason's arrest. Bigelow says in his opinion Mason is insane on the subject. He further states that when the news of Guiteau's crime first reached Mason he was in the service in Texas, and at the time expressed the intention of killing Guiteau. Mason is said to be of the famous family of Senator Mason of Virginia. He will be brought before the police court under charge of assault and battery with intent to kill. The extreme penalty for this offense is eight years imprisonment at hard labor. In the event of conviction by a civil tribunal Mason will be promptly dismissed from the army. He served creditably in the Irish war.

ATLANTIC CABLE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The Tribune to-day has the following:

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Government disasters have culminated in the marquis of Blandford's collapse in Cambridgeport. His retirement was owing to a want of funds and local disorganization of liberals. Electoral defeats have been received in England by Dickson's election in Tyrone. Parnell stated on the authority of the land league in Ulster that the fate of the land act was in the result. He appealed to every passion and spared no personal effort no resources of the league, to influence Catholics and Presbyterians, yet even with the aid of the bishop of Meath, he was unable to secure the support of more than half the Catholics, while the exhorting totally failed to shake the loyalty of the Presbyterians. The result is a profound surprise to all parties. The Parnell candidate only secured 907 votes against 3000 given to each of the other two. Parnell asked Ulster to accept the league and reject the land act, but it has emphatically accepted the land act and decisively rejected the league. The result is the unmitigated discomfiture of Parnell. His explanation shows that complacent frame of mind which is [illegible] in a party leader, but he admits the existence of dismay among his followers. The league is now driven for support to localities where sedition is chronic. The resolution of Gladstone's effort to pacify Ireland by indirectly northern farmers will stimulate the government to repress revolutionary measures agitated and incited by a paid agency.

YOKOHAMA, Aug. 20.—The emperor is still on a tour through the northern provinces.

Great commotion was excited among the non-official classes by the proposed sale of the Hokkaido (the extreme northern island) by the government to officials in their private capacity. The term, 10 years, of the original government colonization commission has expired, and the government proposes to let the development continue with private enterprise aided by government funds.

Railways will be extended throughout the empire but large loans will have to be made by the authorities, hence there is the question of a guaranteed loan to be raised on the government credit in Europe or America. This will be considered on the return of the mikado to Tokio.

The Japanese government and press are firm on the question of retaining possession of the Loo Choo islands in spite of China. It is feared that there will be further complications and that the approaching arrival of the Chinese envoy will not be productive of an amicable settlement.

The new civil and criminal codes will come in force January next. They are modeled on the code Napoleon with local adaptations. A force of gendarmerie on the French basis is being modeled to come into action also at the beginning of next year.

Cholera still prevails in Kumamoto.

Much dissatisfaction is felt by American merchants on account of the sudden notification issued by government to control the sale of kerosene oil. According to this no oil flashing at a lower temperature than 120 degrees Fahrenheit may be imported after the 1st of January next. As there are already on the way hither many cargoes of kerosene oil below that test which cannot arrive till a later date, if the order is allowed to obtain, much will be rendered unsalable to the great loss of shippers or consignees. Foreign ministers are appealed to to ask an extension of the date before the rise in the standard shall take effect. This gravely affects the interest of many merchants in eastern states.

Sir Henry Parkes, English minister, returns shortly.

Hon. Kennedy, charge d'affaire, has been promoted to St. Petersburg. The change is greatly regretted by foreigners and Japanese.

The finance minister has published his estimates from July, 1881 to June, 82. The income is $[illegible], an increase from last year of $[illegible]. Excess over expenditures for the current year, $[illegible].

Women of the South.

[St. Louis Republican.]

A very encouraging sign of the improved spirit [illegible] the south is the growing [illegible] of the need of finding employment for women. The [illegible] gallantry that has kept women in unwilling idleness and dependence is yielding to a more practical view of duties and proprieties, and it is now being slowly admitted that it is not wise that the father of a large family of limited means should earn a precarious living for the entire household, while his daughters, intelligent and of industrious disposition, are debarred from the privilege of assisting him.

The Presbyterian Church.

[New York Tribune.]

A comparative summary of the Presbyterian church just issued, shows that there are thirty-eight Synods, 177 Presbyteries, 622 candidates, against [illegible] last year, 591 licentiates, 5086 ministers, an increase of forty-two, 5598 churches, a gain of [illegible], 581,401 communicants, a gain of only 2765. The aggregate of contributions the past year was $8,074,291, a gain of more than $[illegible]. For home missions, $[illegible] was contributed, for foreign missions, $[illegible], for education, $[illegible] and for church erection, $[illegible].

M[illegible] SEPT [illegible]

[illegible] Having been [illegible] all his life in cheating and deceiving people, and having generally found them credulous and soft-hearted he imagines the public will choose rather to believe him a lunatic than a monster. In a word he gravitates from a state of abject cringing cowardice to a state of devilish audacity. When the president sinks from the effects of the wound he indulges the wretch calls for more guards. When the president rallies and the country rejoices in the hope of his early recovery the villain who shot him is at great pains to express his regret that the bullet wound did not prove instantly mortal. In these changes there is nothing at all mysterious; they are susceptible of easy explanation. The assassin reasons with no little acuteness; for he has quite a keen intellect as well as a very bad heart and very malignant temper. All his intellectual resources, reinforced by the varied experiences of many years of moderately successful rascality, are now devoted to the study of the best means of avoiding the penalty of his last great crime. He knows enough law to know that the only possible avenue of escape is through a plea of insanity. He is, therefore, laying the ground for the interposition of this plea. He knows that the immediate effect of a verdict of acquittal, on this ground would be to send him to a lunatic asylum. But he is also aware that, once acquitted of the crime with which he is charged, he could not be again tried for it; and he is equally well aware that a sane person cannot be permanently confined in a lunatic asylum. He knows that his friends have only to show that he is sane to insure his prompt release. Hence Guiteau's energies are bent to the single purpose of proving himself insane to escape the penitentiary. The prosecution of this purpose is never interrupted except when the president has a relapse and appears in imminent danger of death. Then the audacious schemer is obscured in the cringing, cowardly whelp who dreads the law.

His assertions, frequently made, that he wants the president to die, are part of this play. He knows that the difficulty of proving the insanity plea, in the event of the president's death, will be increased a thousand fold. He therefore argues to himself, in the seclusion of his cell, that the expression of a desire for the president's death will be regarded generally as evidence of his insanity, since, he further argues, it must be assumed that "I desire to escape the penalty of my crime, and chances of my escape will be greatly diminished by the death of my victim." So, with the coarse brutality for which he has always been distinguished, he publishes in the most offensive form the expression of his desire for the president's death. Like all vulgar, common criminals, Guiteau betrays himself by an excess of zeal. In playing the part he has assumed he mouths and rants like a stock actor in the great role of a star performer. In the midst of his miserable assumption a rumor that the president lies at the point of death, or is already dead, penetrates to his cell and the wretch forgets his part, cowers in a corner in abject terror, and pleads for more guards as a captured bandit begs for his life when called to face a loaded and cocked revolver. Guiteau is not insane; he is a monster, a malignant devil. He has escaped the clutches of the law so many times that he has no fear of it; he fears only the mob, and that only when death appears to be hovering over his victim.

It tires the patience to hear this plea of insanity even from a member of Guiteau's family. There is a common tendency now to excuse every unusually atrocious crime on the assumption that no sane person would or could commit such an act. But commission of crime is not proof of insanity but of wickedness, and the plea of insanity is an after thought, the plea of fear and repentance. Fear of the penalty of the law is itself wholesome punishment, and repentance, even through the cowardly motive of fear, may be well enough; but these do not justly absolve from the consequences of crime.

The president's physicians are probably to be blamed for much, but it is rather hard that they should be blamed for trying to protect him from the innumerable quacks, charlatans and humbugs generally who are all the time itching and agonizing to get at him. We observe that a portion of the press quite severely rebukes Dr. Bliss and his associates for not permitting the celebrated, or notorious, Mrs. Sargent of St. Louis to cure him by animal magnetism. One very good objection to this kind of cure is that there is no such thing as animal magnetism. The name is an audacious attempt to give a scientific clothing to a thing that science repudiates. Perhaps Mrs. Dr. Sargent, with her animal magnetic passes wouldn't have done the president any great harm. But if animal magnetism were given its trial, the spiritualists would claim their right to experiment also. And then how could the herb doctor, the [illegible] doctor and the faith doctor be in common courtesy denied the chance to advertise their methods also? In fact it is clear that the president's doctors would have had to draw the line somewhere if they didn't want poor Garfield sweated, blistered or kneaded to death, and they chose to draw it at animal magnetism. We cannot find it in our hearts to blame them for that. We have no very great faith in any school of medicine; the last of them follows tradition rather than science, and by their jealousies and bigotries show how little real science they mix with pills and potions. But the "regular" doctors would have shown much less confidence and faith in their own system than they really have, [illegible] this case to the [illegible] of any [illegible] power. [illegible] would prefer to see the president in the hands of men who pretend to [illegible] scientific [illegible] than [illegible] woman [illegible]

[illegible] was [illegible] the president [illegible] pluck [illegible] no possible [illegible] complicated [illegible] it be possible for any man, however, [illegible] recover.

Several [illegible] of [illegible] generally, almost serving as [illegible] for the [illegible] in the country and sustaining a dense population, [illegible] within the last few years, become remarkable for the establishment of cooperative [illegible] for the manufacture of butter and cheese on an extensive scale and upon the best methods. In one of these counties [illegible] containing some 70,000 inhabitants on [illegible] 900 square miles, there are some twenty-five of these dairy companies in operation, employing an aggregate capital of nearly $100,000 in manufacturing, exclusive of the investment in the cows which produce the milk and which are, of course, the private property of the stockholders in the companies. The operations of the companies have proved highly satisfactory. The milk of from 200 to 400 cows is used in each company, and the articles produced are of excellent quality, and sell in the New York market equally well with the best [illegible] made butter and cheese. The farmers interested have been benefited by the introduction of a new industry and vary their employments accordingly. If butter and cheese making can be profitable where land is worth from $100 to $200 an acre why should it not be profitable with us where land is cheap, and fit for cultivation of both grasses and cereals with great success?

A right good and characteristic story is told by President Garfield's mother of early days. She relates that when left a widow with four little children her pioneer neighbors offered to make a "bee" and split rails for fencing her land. But when these helpers found that this staunch young matron would not furnish them whisky, according to the custom then, they all quit their work, leaving the logs only quartered. But true to her principles and, nothing daunted, the grand little woman herself took up the maul and alone split sixty rails. She says: "Every time I lifted the maul it was so heavy and I so slender its weight nearly pulled me backward." "Are you not proud to think of it?" asked Mrs. Boynton. "Oh," answered Mrs. Garfield, "I am ashamed to think that men were ever such slaves to whisky."

Several papers in Eastern Oregon are still discussing the question whether J. H. Mitchell, during his term in the senate, was a friend or enemy of the Northern Pacific railroad. Though there is really no room for dispute on the point, it is now a matter of no particular consequence. He will not oppose the company hereafter, nor will he be an enemy to the O. R. & N. Company, as he was to the old O. S. N. Company. All that is "fixed" by his nominal employment as an attorney upon regular salary. A "champion of the people" against "monopoly," which he was once so fond of denouncing, has been silenced; and editors beyond the mountains might as well turn to the discussion of fresher and more important topics.

Jay Gould and W. H. Vanderbilt are both said to entertain hopes of reaching the presidency of the United States. All such hopes are vain. Railroad kings and rich men may have their good things, but no such man will ever reach the presidency. That office is not for sale, and cannot be bought. If anybody questions this let him ask Mr. Tilden for a statement of his experience.

Guiteau has a horror for murder. "Do they want to murder me?" he asked in terror, when the guard tried to kill him; his manner showing how deeply he detests that species of crime. He was assured that he should be well taken care of, and the man who had tried to kill him was committed for punishment.

It is now said that the sale of Jefferson Davis' book is rapidly increasing in the south, and is becoming much larger than in the north. The Appletons report that twenty thousand copies have been recently delivered in the southern states, and that they still have a large number of orders unfilled.

Earnings of the Northern Pacific railroad for seven months ending July 31, 1881, amounted to $1,639,867 a gain of $464,165 over the corresponding period of last year.

[illegible]—[illegible] with [illegible] charged with [illegible] to commit [illegible] Miller [illegible] insanity [illegible] before the police court [illegible] insanity judge.

[illegible]—[illegible] coming down [illegible] from the [illegible] yesterday afternoon [illegible] aground near the mouth of the Washougal. The engines were reversed and worked [illegible] for some time, but the steamer could not be [illegible]. The steamer [illegible] came up and [illegible] hitching on to the Reed tugged away for a time, [illegible] could not "budge" her, however, and was forced [illegible] give up the task. The steamer ran aground at [illegible] in the afternoon, and passengers and [illegible] did not reach the city until after 12 o'clock. The steamer Dixie Thompson, which was at the Cascades, was sent for and brought the passengers and mails down to this city. The Dixie made several attempts to pull the steamer off but failed. It will be necessary to take off all the freight before the Reed can be got off.

CELESTIAL PHENOMENON.—A very beautiful phenomenon appeared last evening in the southern heavens about 10 o'clock. A white and filmy substance not unlike smoke shaped itself into the form of a rainbow, extending from east to west. It was a number of degrees south of the zenith, broad and well defined. When first seen the belt extended from the western horizon to nearly mid-heavens. Gradually it grew eastward until an unbroken bow—from horizon to horizon—was presented to the view. The western half of the arch was much brighter than the eastern. The phenomenon lasted several minutes, when it began to fade away and soon entirely disappeared. It was perfectly white, and the part that was the brighter obscured the stars. At the time the heavens were cloudless.

THE FATAL DOSE.—James Straightfield, the individual who took a dose of laudanum with suicidal intent at the Nicolai hotel on Sunday night, died from the effects of the poison yesterday morning at [illegible] o'clock. The physicians did everything in their power to avert death, but all to no purpose. Papers in his pocket showed that he was an Englishman by birth and was naturalized in 1878. He had tax receipts for 80 acres of land he owned in Kansas, and a money order for $29. He has been hereabout six months, and has been at work on the sewers of this city. The coroner did not deem an inquest necessary and the deceased was buried at Lone Fir cemetery yesterday afternoon.

THE NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.—The school building now under way on the school block on Fifth and [illegible] streets will be ready for occupancy on Monday. All the children belonging to the seventh grade B [illegible] living in the Harrison street district north of [illegible] and west of Third street as far south as the [illegible] will attend this new school. Mrs. Julia [illegible] will have charge. Parents interested will please make a note of this arrangement. This building, though hastily constructed, is as large a school room as any in the city, is well ventilated, well lighted and comfortably seated, and will be a pleasant place for study.

SURGICAL OPERATION.—Yesterday morning Drs. [illegible] Saylor, C. C. Strong, H. C. Wilson and W. H. [illegible] held a consultation on the case of ex-Gov. [illegible] J. Whitmore at Good Samaritan Hospital. The patient had a cancer growing upon the lower [illegible]. It was decided that the only chance of saving the patient's life was the knife. Dr. Saylor, with the assistance of the others, proceeded to cut the [illegible] out and then [illegible] up the lip. The operation [illegible] a very delicate one.

THE PACKARD LIGHTER.—Shipments of fall merchandise for this port being very heavy now the Columbia, which sails from San Francisco this morning, will have nearly 2,200 tons of freight. It is [illegible] that she will lighter a few hundred tons before proceeding up the river. Arrangements have been made by which freight will be transferred, if necessary, to river boats with the least possible delay, [illegible] in any case passengers will get through [illegible].

[illegible]—McDonald, Smith and McAllister, the three parties who created such a disturbance Sunday morning near the corner of First and [illegible] streets, and who assaulted policeman Moft, [illegible] the sum of $15 yesterday in police court. The defendants were at once arrested on a charge of resisting an officer and held to appear in the sum of $250. Their examination was continued until today.

[illegible] GUN.—On the last trip of the steamer Geo. W. Elder to this port she brought a large [illegible] cannon weighing eight tons. This piece of [illegible] is intended for Fort Canby, but as it could not be landed at Astoria, the gun was brought on up to this port. Last night the steamer Bonita went alongside the Elder and the huge and ponderous "shooting iron" was safely lowered to the deck of the former.

NEW MUSIC.—Mr. Wiley B. Allen, the music dealer at No. 131 Third street, near Morrison, has laid on our table the following pieces of choice new music: "Garden City Schottische," composed by [illegible] Rosenberg; "Cast one Little Thought for Me," [illegible] by Will L. Thompson; a neat musical publication called "Musical Pastime," and "Days that [illegible] Seem the Brightest."

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the society takes place to-night, at which the officers for the ensuing year will be elected. The society will meet at 7:30 for the transaction of business, after which the regular rehearsal of the "Bells of Normandy" will take place. It is earnestly desired that every member will be present.

[illegible] MIDDLE SANDS.—The Astorian of yesterday says: "The schooner Emily Stephens started [illegible] Thursday, got into a scrape on the middle [illegible], set her signals for help, and the life-saving [illegible] put out to her aid, [illegible] the tug reached her and towed her safely [illegible] to port. She was [illegible] to be all right yesterday."

THE DELTA LITERARY CIRCLE.—All members of the Delta Literary Circle who who desire to participate in its reorganization are cordially invited to attend a meeting to be held for that purpose at the house of Miss Minnie Carson, No. 309 Fifth street, on Wednesday evening, September 14th, at 7:30 o'clock.

THE FIRST HOP.—The newly organized Columbia [illegible] Club will give their first ball at Masonic hall [illegible] evening of this week. Quite a number of invitations have been issued. The hall will be handsomely decorated for the occasion and the club will exert themselves to open the season auspiciously.

[illegible] INCENDIARISM.—Late Sunday night fire was discovered in an unoccupied dwelling on [illegible] street between D and E, and was extinguished by neighbors. No general alarm was sounded. The fire was [illegible] the work of incendiaries, as kerosene had been poured on the floor and walls.

DAILY MAIL SERVICE.—We are informed by Capt. [illegible] that daily mail service will be placed on the [illegible] R. & N. Co.'s road between Wallula and Spokane [illegible] on the 20th inst. This will be good news to residents of that portion of Washington territory.

RETURNED.—Rev. Geo. F. Plummer returned by [illegible] steamer from the east, where he spent the summer, and Sunday occupied the pulpit at Trinity [illegible].

Our regulator set forward to-day noon, one minute.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

S. Friedlander, the auctioneer, will remove this week to the old auction stand, southeast corner of First and Pine. See ad.

Mrs. A. E. West, the popular milliner at No. 27 Washington street, will hold a grand fall opening today and to-morrow. Ladies are specially invited. She has a large and elegant assortment of French imported hats and bonnets.

W. J. Vanschuyver is the agent for the justly celebrated Peruvian Bitters, acknowledged to be the finest in the world. These bitters cure effectually malarial diseases, vitalize the system, and arrest the ravages of the dreadful alcohol habit, dipsomania.

Lewis & Strauss of the White House are out again in an important announcement. They have fall importations direct from New York which embrace the latest novelties in dress goods; also an elegant stock of French millinery goods. Ladies, give the White House a call.

T. A. Shane will on next Saturday reopen the old dry goods store at No. 147 Third street for many years occupied by John Wilson and of late by Olds & King, with a large and beautiful stock of dry and fancy goods, selected with great care from the best markets. The above will in future be known as the city dry goods store.

THE HARRISBURG FIRE.

Additional Particulars of the Burning of the Large Warehouse—Gallant Conduct of Conductor Stroud and Others.

HARRISBURG, Or., Sept. 12, 1881.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The citizens of Harrisburg desire to express, through your valuable paper, their thanks for and appreciation of the timely and efficient assistance rendered them by G. M. Stroud, the gentlemanly conductor of the O. & C. R. R. passenger train which arrived here on last Friday at the time when a fire had caught in the warehouse owned by Hiram Smith and rented to Messrs. Ramp & Schooling, and distant from the depot about sixty feet. Conductor Stroud taking in the situation at a glance, had his engine placed opposite the fire and all citizens and trainmen formed in line at once and sent water from the engine tank in a lively manner, but the fiend had gained too much advantage and become uncontrollable; the next thing done was to save the company's depot building and the large warehouse owned by Aley & Smeers, which looked to be impossible, the flames leaping almost into the shingles on the depot building, but owing to a change in the direction of the wind from north to northeast, the combined effort of all hands was crowned with success, and further destruction of property was stayed. The loss will fall heavily on Messrs. Ramp & Schooling, they had furnished sacks to farmers for delivering wheat to fill the warehouse to its fullest capacity and had already received 10,000 bushels. No insurance on wheat or house; loss, $10,000, which will certainly warn people of the advantage of insurance.

Land Monopolists.

[Dalles Mountaineer.]

The stock range of one firm in the south end of Grant county is fifty miles wide and one hundred and twenty-five miles long. This firm by taking advantage of the nefarious swamp land laws of Oregon now hold possession of the watering places in this vast region, and so effectually keep settlers out, as if they had a patent for the whole region. There is much valuable land in this region upon which settlers would gladly locate, but for the spurious claims of these cattle kings. Six thousand two hundred and fifty square miles held by one rich company is startling yet it is true. The poor man who wants 160 acres of this 4,000,000 acres upon which to make a home for a family, soon finds that he is powerless to contend for his rights and sadly moves on. There is a condition of affairs in south-eastern Oregon of which our law-makers and courts are as ignorant as of the domestic affairs of the inhabitants of the moon. An immigrant who settles in that region is soon made to feel that he must quit the country or be lawed out of his little property. The result is that nobody does settle upon one of these ranges. How long this condition of affairs is going to exist, no man can tell.

The court room in the new Walla Walla court house is 52x72 feet, with ceilings 21 feet high. From the cupola windows, which are 70 feet above the ground, a magnificent view of the city and valley is obtained. The contractors will have the court room, if not the whole building, ready for occupancy before the meeting of the next term of the district court.

THE SURRENDER OF YORKTOWN.

Marching to the Tune "The World Turned Upside Down."

[illegible]

"Yes, sir," returned Laurens, with a bow, "[illegible] is here, article."

"Then said Ross, "if that is your opinion, why is it here?"

Whereupon Laurens, who had been made prisoner at Charleston with Lincoln's army, proceeded to remind Ross that the Americans on that occasion had made a brave defense, but were ungallantly refused any honors of surrender other than to march out with colors cased and drums not beating a British or a German march.

"But," rejoined Ross, "my Lord Cornwallis did not command at Charleston."

"There, sir," said Laurens, "you extort another observation. It is not the individual that is here considered; it is the nation. This remains an article, or I cease to be a commissioner."

Nothing more was to be said; the article stood and the enemy marched out with colors cased, while the tune they chose to follow was an old British march with the quite appropriate title of "The World Turned Upside Down."

As the prisoners moved out of their works along the Hampton road they found the French and American armies drawn up on either side of the way, the Americans on the right, and extending for more than a mile toward the field of surrender. The French troops presented a brilliant spectacle in their white uniforms, with plumed and decorated officers at their head, and gorgeous standards of white silk, embroidered with golden fleurs-de-lis, floating along the line. The Americans were less of an attraction in outward appearance, but not the less eagerly eyed by their late antagonists. Among the war-worn Continentals there was variety of dress, poor at the best, distinguishing the men of the different lines; but to compensate for lack of show there was a soldierly bearing about them which commanded attention. The militia formed in their rear presented a less martial sight so far as clothing and order were concerned. But all these men were conquerors, and their very appearance bespoke the hardships and privation they and their states had undergone to win in the struggle. At the head of the respective lines were the commanding generals, nobly mounted—Washington, Rochambeau, Lafayette, Lincoln, Steuben, Knox, and the rest. Leading the British came Gen. O'Hara instead of Cornwallis. The latter pleaded illness, but he sent his sword by O'Hara to be given up to Washington. As O'Hara advanced to the chief he was referred to Lincoln, who, upon receiving the sword as a token of the enemy's submission, immediately returned it to the British general, whose troops then marched between the two lines to a field on the right, where they grounded their arms.

THE SOURCE OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

A Geographical Correction—Lake Itaska Dethroned—Work for Mapmakers.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

For years Lake Itaska has been regarded, both by geographical societies and map-makers, as well as by the public generally, as the source of the grandest of rivers—the mighty Mississippi. But geographical knowledge, like other knowledge, is nothing if it is not progressive, and in its history we have seen the firmly rooted beliefs of centuries torn up and tossed aside by the explorations and reasoning of intrepid travelers, who, respecting truth and facts more than mere theory, have accepted nothing without proof, merely because others have so accepted it. This is the ground occupied by Captain Willard Glazier in his explorations in search of the source of the Mississippi.

Starting for the headwaters of this great river in July last, he learned that the dense forests which surround the source of the Father of Waters were rarely penetrated by white men or even by Indians, at any time except in winter, when lakes and rivers were frozen up, and the whole surface of the country covered with a mantle of snow.

He also heard, through the Indian guides and interpreters who accompanied him, that the aboriginal inhabitants of these primeval forests did not regard Itaska as the source; but while rejecting it, differed among themselves as to what lake really was the fountain head. Some claimed that the stream from Itaska was not itself the main stream, but flowed into the river proper some three miles below the lake. The stream to which it was tributary, though narrower, was, they claim, deeper and swifter, bringing in united streams more water than the one from Lake Itaska.

Others considered the Itaska stream as the main one, but talked of another lake, broad and beautiful, which lay above Itaska and poured its clear waters into the accepted source through a small stream which entered the southern arm of Lake Itaska. Captain Glazier determined to thoroughly examine all this region and to settle definitely and forever the true source of the Father of Waters.

Acting in accordance with this design the captain pushed on toward Itaska, intending to make it a starting point for further explorations. Reaching this objective point, after innumerable hardships, he camped on Schoolcraft's island, and after a day of rest he directed operations toward the lakes and streams of the surrounding country.

Thoroughly surveying the stream that the Indians claimed to be the main one, he found it much inferior in volume to that from Itaska. This point settled, he closely examined the shores of Lake Itaska for tributary streams, finding but three of any importance. Of these three the one by far the largest came in at the extreme head of the lake, at a point where it is nearly filled with bullrushes.

Taking two canoes, Captain Glazier ascended this stream, which, though shallow, is rapid, yet so narrow in places that to jump across it would be an easy task. Following its windings for about three-quarters of a mile, he entered what appeared to be a little lake filled with rushes. Pushing through this, however, the canoes glided out upon the still surface of a magnificent lake, clear as crystal, with pebbly bottom, and shores covered with a thick growth of pine. The lake is formed irregularly in the shape of a heart, having but one marked promontory. Its greatest length is about two miles, and its width a mile and a half.

Captain Glazier found that this lake was supplied by three little rivulets, which rose in swamps a few miles from the lake, and thoroughly convinced that this beautiful lake was the true source of the mighty Mississippi he proclaimed it as such. Without waiting for discussion the members of the party decided unanimously and by acclamation to call it Lake Glazier, in his honor. Modestly expressing his thanks for this mark of their appreciation, Captain Glazier said that, though he firmly believed this lake to be the source of the river, he should relax none of his vigilance on the trip through the unknown part of the stream, but would carefully examine all streams flowing into the Mississippi, in order to be positive that it was really the main stream. It is needless to add that no larger stream was found.

KITTITASS VALLEY.

Ellensburg Notes—A Kittitass Mound—Evidences of an Extinct Race.

[illegible]

[illegible] crops of the country [illegible] rapidly increasing trade of the entire valley is concentrated here. Then came Mr. L. Blum[illegible], from New York city, and recently Thomas Johnson, the pioneer merchant, now owns and operates [illegible] of the Kittitass valley, is [illegible] three of the largest general merchandise establishments in this section of the territory. The various other lines are also represented. A fully-equipped drug store, A. Lawrence proprietor, also acting postmaster and stage agent. Pressey & Spragne's furniture factory, the machinery of which is run by water-power, two large blacksmithing and two wagon-making shops; four hotels, saddlery and harness shop, and three saloons. The firm of Geo. F. Smith & Bro., the largest stock-dealers and dairy farmers in the territory, is just finishing an immense livery and sale stable with large stock yards, corrals and pastures connected, one of the most extensive in the Yakima country. In the vicinity of the town and at other points in the valley are four flouring, four saw and two shingle mills. The annual trade of Ellensburg will amount in the aggregate from $150,000 to $200,000.

The town is distant about 1½ miles from the Yakima river. The location, upon a gentle acclivity or plateau, admits of a most excellent system of drainage. Wilson creek, quite a pretty stream, flows through the town, affording a fair water power and every facility for irrigating and beautifying the gardens and surroundings—a scheme which is about to be extensively inaugurated, being one of the conditions wisely imposed by the town-site proprietor prior to giving the purchaser a final title. The site is sufficiently elevated to command an unobstructed view of nearly the entire valley. The rugged outlines of a section of the snow-clad Cascades rise clearly in the not distant background, crowning a scene in which many varied and distinctive elements of picturesque beauty and impressive grandeur most charmingly blend.

GENERAL NOTES.

Sunday last this town was the scene of a somewhat novel and exciting performance, at least so it appeared to sojourners and newcomers, but being characteristically peculiar to frontier life, hence it was not so much of a novelty to the average resident who looked on with much the same feeling that would animate the breast of a Mexican at a bull-fight. The actors in the play were some two hundred of the Wenatchee Indians, who were en route to the Puyallup to engage in hop-picking. During the early part of the day, as they lounged upon their calico ponies or squatted in groups upon the principal business streets, their costumes representing the varied hues of the rainbow—red, of course, being the predominating color, they presented a highly picturesque and peaceful appearance, both individually and collectively. But later in the day a number of the bucks indulged too freely in gin—surreptitiously obtained—and started in after the most approved fashion of Young America to "make Rome howl;" in which laudable Sunday sport it appears they were eminently successful. Finally among a crowd of near a hundred at one of the principal business corners some dozen or more engaged among themselves in a general free fight, several stripped to the waist. In one instance a hatchet and in several others knives were beginning to be quite freely used, ere the authorities of the place could interfere to quell the disturbance, which was accomplished by hand cuffing the more obstreperous of the combatants and marching them to the lock-up. Although besmeared with much blood, strange to relate none of the Indians were seriously hurt and after a night's detention were allowed to proceed on their way to the happy hop-picking grounds.

"A KITTITASS MOUND—EVIDENCES OF AN EXTINCT RACE."

It is perhaps scarce even known outside of this immediate locality that at the lower end of the principal business street of this town is a mound resembling externally the Tenino and other mounds in Oregon and this territory, with this point of difference, however, that directly underneath this uptreared mass of earth is a cave about 8 feet wide by 4 feet in height. The narrow entrance or orifice leading from the outside world to this naturally formed cell has been provided with a door and utilized by the local authorities as a jail. A prominent county official and several of the leading, substantial men of the place, all of them gentlemen of scientific tastes, whose attention had been directed to this subject by the elaborate communications from different scientific standpoints, in recent issues of THE OREGONIAN, proposed an investigation with the idea of possibly discovering some clue which might lead to a solution of the problem, as to the primary or original cause of its formation. The examination began by noting that the stones all lay around the outer edge or base of the mound; and as wisely remarked by one of the party, "even the Kittitass zephyrs which at times ascended in spiral currents, were not sufficiently strong to cause these stones, especially the larger ones, to travel up an inclined plane; whereas another element could naturally and easily take them in an opposite direction. Hence if the solution of the problem had been logically and scientifically reduced to the question, whether fish or man, was the mound builder—excluding all natural causes such as the action of the elements, etc.—then should the fish be held responsible as the original builder." The party then proceeded to make a careful examination of the interior of the structure with the idea of discovering if possible some evidence of an extinct race, when lo! upon opening the door they discovered the most undoubted evidence of a race. But at this moment the examination was interrupted by our worthy county official, who, placing his hand upon the back of his neck with an expression of dismay, suddenly remembered that he had left a valuable gold watch upon the piano and the door of his house wide open, which caused him to make a hasty departure, and strange to relate, the others were struck with flashes of memory of the same or a similar nature, and stood not upon the order of their going. Indeed, leaving in a manner totally inconsistent with their former well-sustained dignity as "leading citizens and substantial men of the place." Subsequent explorations revealed to your correspondent the cause of the hasty departure of the scientific exploring party. It appears that a race of hornets, by no means extinct, but well developed and vigorous, were in full possession of the interior of the mound. It has been since remarked in the most painfully positive way by one of the aforesaid scientific men of scientific tastes, That "he wanted no more race in his, extinct or any other kind." From which I conclude that science in this burg has received a blow from the effects of which it will require time to recover, hence further exploration of the mound in the interest of science is indefinitely postponed.

General Anderson, engineer-in-chief of the N. P. R. Co., passed through this valley last Tuesday en route to the sound via the Snoqualmie pass.

Engineer Kingsbury and party, of the N. P. R. Co., have been changed from the Cascade division to that of the Rocky Ford division, in the valley of the Yellowstone.

Geo. F. Smith, of the firm of G. F. Smith & Bro., left yesterday for Seattle via the Snoqualmie pass, with 280 head of superb beef cattle. He expects to reach Seattle about the 18th inst.

The Jamison government survey party having finished their contract of nine townships of hill lands—principally timbered and grazing tracts, lying northeast of this valley and adjacent to the Cascade range, are about to commence the survey of the sections extending from Thorp's in the upper or west end of this valley, towards the Snoqualmie pass.

No damage was done to crops in this valley by the heavy rains of Tuesday last. ESCRITO.
